

Wyatt Schroeder

Wyatt has worked on the issue of homelessness and affordable housing for over 14 years, stemming from a fervent belief that everyone deserves a safe, stable, and affordable home. He has served roles from executive nonprofit leadership to grassroots organizer to local government official.

Wyatt serves as the Executive Director of Hemlock & Forge, a supportive housing consultancy focused on ending homelessness in the Mid-Atlantic. He also serves as a Principal at Bowling Business Strategies, a behavioral health consulting firm providing services across the nation.

Prior to launching Hemlock & Forge, Wyatt was the Director of Community Partnerships for the City of Boise, guiding all social service partnerships for City Hall. He has served a number of roles in his work on housing equity, including Executive Director of CATCH, Idaho's largest supportive housing agency and Senior Manager at Agnew::Beck Consulting, serving communities in Idaho and Alaska by designing and managing public-private partnerships that developed affordable housing and increased housing outcomes for marginalized populations.

Wyatt holds a Master of Business Administration from Villanova University and a Bachelor of Arts from Allegheny College. And a professional certificate on Real Estate Development from Fordham University. You can find him living in Philadelphia, PA, watching baseball or sneaking into the Wissahickon for the afternoon.
